SeaBear Wild Salmon

The SeaBear Story

Seafood Experiences to Share

In 1957, Anacortes fisherman Tom Savidge and his wife Marie built a backyard smokehouse and began selling smoked wild salmon to local taverns. With that, Specialty Seafoods (later renamed SeaBear after Native American legend) was born. The tavern owners loved Tom's smoked salmon, but asked him to preserve it longer.

Tom's ingenuity answered their request with a whole new idea in packaging:

The Gold Seal pouch, which preserves the salmon naturally, so no refrigeration is required.

This innovation (for which he received a patent) made it easy for tourists traveling through the Northwest to take Tom's salmon back home, or to ship it to family and friends. From this, word spread about "the legendary flavor of the Pacific Northwest."

Our Handcrafted Way

SeaBear's Gold Seal Pouch

Here's how the Gold Seal Pouch works: The seafood is vacuum-sealed in the pouch, and then gently cooked in its own natural oils. This process preserves the seafood naturally, so no artificial preservatives or fillers are ever required, nor are any artificial colors or flavors ever used. As long as the pouch is not opened, leaking or punctured, the seafood will stay good for many years (we typically say at least four years, but even that is conservative).

Since our founding in 1957, we have featured 100% pure, natural wild salmon from the cold waters of Alaska. SeaBear's standards are so strict, that less than 1% of Alaskan salmon meets our specifications for our signature smoked salmon. Every fillet goes through a 15 step process, with each step done by hand - over a full 2 days in our small batch custom smokehouse. The result: a moist, flaky, fully cooked salmon unlike any other in the world.

Though we've come a long way from the backyard smokehouse built by Tom and Mary, our passion for thrilling customers hasn't faded one bit! Whether your customers are giving SeaBear as a gift, or putting it to use in their own kitchen, our goal is to provide them with a wonderful and memorable, "Seafood Experience to Share™."

Our Guarantee

The Fisherman's Oath

At SeaBear, we are passionate about two things: making great seafood, and thrilling our customers. Since 1957, we've taken great pride in sharing with you the bounty of the Pacific Northwest. If for any reason you are not absolutely thrilled with our products and service, we will immediately replace your order, refund your money, or do whatever it takes to make it right. That is our promise.

Wild Alaskan King

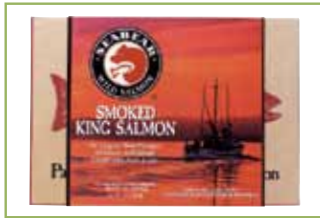

Smoked Salmon

Smoked Wild King Salmon

King Salmon is the largest of all wild salmon, ranging from 20-70 pounds. These majestic salmon offer fillets that are orange-red in color, with big, thick flakes that allow the least amount of smoke to be absorbed during the smoking process, creating a very subtle taste. The Smoked King Salmon is by far the least “smoky” of all SeaBear’s smoked products. Kosher certified. No refrigeration required.

Wild Alaskan

Smoked Salmon

Smoked Wild Alaskan Salmon

Keta salmon is one of the most abundant salmon in the world, making it a great value. The light fillet color allows the salmon to absorb the hearty wood flavor of the Alder wood smoke. It is our “smokiest” salmon. Kosher certified. No refrigeration required.
